Boston Bans "Rock" Rallies

BOSTON — (UP) — Mayor John B. Hynes today banned teen-age rock and roll sessions in public halls following a Boston Arena "big beat" jam session that erupted into sluggings and stabbings.

About 5000 persons, mostly teen-agers, jammed the arena Saturday for disc jockey Alan Freed's show that was held in nearly complete darkness. When the show was over, a series of violent street fights started. Freed is a former Cleveland disc jockey.

Hynes said, "These so-called musical programs are a disgrace and must be stopped. As far as I'm concerned, Boston has seen the last of them."
